Jumping My Shadow
Skyclad

C                   Am
Maybe someday someone will love me
C                        Am
for what I am instead of what I should be C                        Am
until that day I ll just sit here weeping
C                      Am
chasing dreams is like shadow leaping
G                                Em
The face behind the mirror an unrecognized reflection
G                                        Em
his eyes are old and tired, filled with bitter recollection
G                                    Em
The cross that he has carried was a burden I ve made
       C                               Em
It s a baptism of tears, they are the seas in which I bathe

                 Am                             G                Em
cause there s a fire in my heart but I can t breathe for the smoke
           Am                             F         Em
Seems that I m living proof, my life s a practical joke
          Am                            G           Em
There s a wind in my sails but I have lost all my direction
     Am                        F                          Em
With no stars to guide me, now you re not here beside me anymore
