Intro: Bm A G F#m (x2) Bm

Bm          A                    G      F#m
Greed s all gone now, there s no question
         Bm                                  A     G                 F#m
And I can see you push your hair behind your ears, Regain your balance
        Bm                  A                 G                      F#m
Doesn t matter where she is tonight, Or with whoever she spends her time
         Bm                  A                  G                      F#m
If these arms were meant to hold her, They were never meant to hold her so tight

                      Bm
For the love of that girl
             A            G      F#m
Greed s all gone now, the panic subsides
             Bm                    A               G                  F#m
When I could run, pulling arms to love her, Try to put myself on on the inside

                      C#m                                G#m
For the love of that girl, Tears swell, you don t know why
                      C#m                                 G#m            G#7
For the love of that girl, They never fall, they can never run dry
                       Bm
For the love of that girl
```

Bm A G F#m (x2)

```
Bm              A                G                F#m
Promise is never over, never questioned it needed reply
                Bm                  A            G                    F#m
But she could breathe deep into my neck, Let me know I m just on the outside

                      C#m                        G#m
For the love of that girl, Tears swell, you don t know why
                      C#m                                 G#m             G#7
For the love of that girl, They never fall, they can never run dry
                       Bm
For the love of that girl
            A                       G     F#m
Greed s all gone now, there s no question
          Bm                                    A     G            F#m
And I can see you push your hair behind your ears, Regain your balance
         Bm                    A              G                      F#m
Doesn t matter where she is tonight, Or with whoever she spends her time
         Bm                  A                          G                  F#m
```

If these arms were meant to hold her, They were never meant to hold her so tight

```
                        C#m                        G#m
For the love of that girl, Tears swell, you don t know why
                        C#m                               G#m           G#7
For the love of that girl, They never fall, they can never run dry
                        C#m                      G#m
For the love of that girl, Tears swell, you don t know why
                        C#m                               G#m           G#7
For the love of that girl, They never fall, they can never run dry
                        Bm
For the love of that girl
