And his thoughts are full of strangers, corridors of naked lights

And his mind once full of reason, Now there more than meets the eye

Now a strangers face he carries with him

He likes a bit of reading on the subway home
A distant radio s whistling tunes that nobody knows
At home a house awaits him, he unlocks the door
Thinking once there was a sea here but there never was a door

And his thoughts are full of strangers, and his eyes too numb too see
And nothing, that he knows of, and nowhere where he s been
Was never quite like this

Repeat chorus 1

Ending:

Bm/E C#m/E D/E

C# Bm/E C#m/E D/E C#m/E Bm/E C#m/E D/E
and at heart he s full of strangers, dodging on his train of thought
