Brats in battalions were ruling the streets

Who never conceived of us billion dollar babies

Militant mothers hiding in their basements

Using pots and pans as their shields and their helmets

Molotov milk bottles heaved from pink high chairs

While Mother's Lib burned birth certificate papers

Dad gets his allowance from his sonny the dealer

Who's public to the world but involved in high finance

Sister's out till five doing banker's son's hours

But she owns a Maserati that's a gift from his father

Stopped at full speed at one hundred miles per hour

The Colgate invisible shield finally got 'em

But I laughed to myself at the men and the ladies

Who never conceived of us billion dollar babies
