TAB Key

- YbZ - bend the note at fret Y to the same pitch as the note found at fret Z
- / - slide up
- - slide down
- U - upstroke
- V - volume swell
- () - incidental note

[] - echo note
~ - hold note
(but not enough for it to be an arpeggio)

Notes

In the intro and verses Guitar 1 uses a volume pedal to swell all the notes.

There are a lot of noise effects in the intro and background of the verses. The same noise track is used for both verses. If you want to results will depend on what equipment you own.

In choruses 1, 2 and 4 Guitar 1 plays notes based on E, A and Dsus2 chord shapes. This part can be heard clearest in the left hand side stereo channel. Guitar 2 plays the powerchords, sounding clearest in the right hand side stereo channel. Chorus 3 differs in that it uses diads, as in the Stratospheric Preaching section.

The Stratospheric Preaching section uses diads for the first 8 bars. The last 8-bars are similar to a standard chorus.

In Guitar solo 1, the right hand stereo channel has the clean guitar. In the left hand channel the solo has delay/echo added. The backing for the solo is most prominent in the left hand channel - It can be tricky to pick out as it blends in with the delayed solo guitar signal. The backing track played by Guitar 1 is based around a 3-octave pattern, using the root note of the implied backing chord. For the last 4-bars Guitar 2 is present.

Guitar solo 2 is difficult to hear, as Guitar 3 is low in the mix. This solo is based on the E-minor pentatonic scale. The backing for the solo is similar to a standard chorus.
