Beautiful song that I first heard in Breaking Bad. The original is in 430 Hz instead of 440, so you can either fiddle with your tuner and guitar to get it to the correct pitch, or simply not play along with it at all and just use your memory instead. The timing in this song is very strange, but I ll do my best to transcribe it to something somewhat understandable.

Capo on 3rd fret

Intro:

Em G A Em
Em B7 Em (hold for two measures)

First half:

Em G A Em Em G B7
Whhhhhhhhy saaaay goooooodbyyyyye?

Em G A Em
We are born again when we die

B7 Em
But we will never leave our lives

Break:

C G Em D A
Em G A Em
Em B7 Em (hold for two measures)

Second half:

Em G A Em G B7
Everything that ever will be always has been

Em

G A

Em

B7

Em

And everything that ever has been always will be

And that s it. It s not a difficult song to play, but the pattern is pretty weird, so give it a bit of practice.
