            Em                         C
You took a time bomb and a case of crackers
              D            (D-B)    Em     (Em-C) G  (G-D)
And you made a maelstrom of organic debris,
                 Em                       C
then you took a work bench, and a rusty anvil,
         D                (D-B)      Em     (Em-C) G  (G-D)
and you polished them for everyone to see,

            Em                  C
you have created an unhealthy monster,
              D       (G-A)        B         B
but you re nowhere but nowhere to be found,
     Em                           C
so I guess I ll just cope with my provisions,
      D           (D-B)        Em        (Em-C)
From now until the day they lay me down

            Em                     C
You took a baboon and made him perfect
          D          (D-B)         Em     (Em-C) G  (G-D)
You took a lion and stripped him of his pride
                 Em                          C
Then you took a million more varieties a scalpel and a sartory
          D             (D-B)      Em     (Em-C) G  (G-D)
And you stitched up a horrible surprise

            Em                  C
You have created an unsocial monster
          D          (G-A)        B         B
And you re searched for all over the globe
     Em                             C
And most believe that things would sure be better
          D                D           Em       Em
If you d come down here and tell us what you know

D                         Em
Who is to blame for this? Someone tell me please

    D                              Em
His handiwork is flawed and it s there for all to see
  D                                Em
Mutations, aberrations and blatant anomalies

    C           C           D       (D-B)
They multiply and give rise to this...monstrosity,

            Em                              C
You took the most abundant smallest bits of matter
         D                      Em
And you instilled them with affinity
            Em                          C
And then you stratified accumulations Weeded out bad variations
    D                           Em
And blended up your unique recipe

          Em                C
You have created a powerful monster
       D          (G-A)          B           B
With direction and purpose all its own
      Em                          C
And if you were here would things be any different?
         D          (D-B)          Em         (Em-C)
Or are you just a mosaic of thoughts alone?
