I used to see the night so anxious, but now I know
The only thing it ever taught me was a grand illusion
That comes and goes, the city blanketed of snow.

What if we die, no end and no conclusion.
How could you smile, just walk away.
Well I don t know.
I don t know.

I met you at the railroad station, now years ago.
And something happened on the night I last drank with you in the neon glow.
Now I don t see you anymore.

The Midwestern sky, is gray and cold.
The sun never shines, but that s alright.
And I couldn t find the letters that you wrote me.
What did you write? Where d you go, well I don t know. No.

Take a little time gonna roll the dice
Taken for a ride, any normal life will do, too.
Find another way, try to break the ice
Every day and night, the banana peels were true (?). True.
