There was a man named Hatma Gandi
                        C/G
He would not bow down he would not fight
                     C/G
He knew the deal was down and dirty
                     C/G
                                       C
And nothing wrong could make it right away....
                                                    C/G
                                                           G
But he knew his duty, and the prize he had to pay....
Just another holy man who tried to be a friend
                         C/G
My God, they killed him.

                C/G
Another man from Atlanta, Georgia
                 C/G
By name of Martin Luther King
                           C/G
He shook the land like the rolling thunder
                     C/G
And made the bells of freedom ring, today....
                                                        C/G
                                                               G
With a dream of beauty, that they could not burn away....
Just another holy man who dared to make a stand
            G
                         C/G
My God, they killed him.
               C/G
The only Son of God Almighty
                   C/G
The holy one called Jesus Christ
                      C/G
