

Ive Got A Lot To Learn
Brooks & Dunn

D E D

                                  D                                  E
These honky-tonks and bright city lights used to thrill me.
I'd paint the yawn and stumble in at dawn.
But now there's no one listening for my footsteps.
                                  D                                  E
And it's why I've been down to one more night alone.

CHORUS:

          D                                  E                                  A
I thought I had her wrapped around my fingers.
I didn't think this wish would ever burn.
          D                                  E
I'd always thought she'd take me back.
          A                                  D
But she taught me the cold hard facts.
                                  E                                  A
When it comes to love, I've got a lot to learn.

                                  D                                  E
It never crossed my mind that she might leave me.
She did her best to love me till the end.
If she were here I know I'd treat her better.
          D                                  E
But I won't ever get that chance again.
