English:

Under the endless clouds,
I was with my mother that day.
I put up a parasol; she pulled my hand
along the summer path we tread.

In the cicada rains, with a voice that seems to disappear, again and again
I said, Everyone lives their lives alone, never turning to look back.

Being too childish, I ask questions that have no answer.
I eventually fell asleep, leaning against your back, without even crying.

I could sense the coming rain from the echoing, distant thunder.

It s as if it foretold
what would happen to us after that.

Coming closer to you that day,
I understood for the first time.
I suddenly huddled down and shed
my final tears.

Your feelings;
The smell of that summer.
