Worthy of Your Esteem " by Hayden

Tabbed by James O-L (<http://www.myspace.com/jamesol>).

Great tune. Simple. I'm sure I'm missing many subtleties of the song, but these chords sound aight to me.

All C chords are played with an extra G bass note in them. (Played with your pinky finger.)

Standard tuning in C Major.

Intro Chords:

C            Am            Em
C            Am            Em

Verse 1:

C                    Am                    Em
Lately you ve been so mean, it s guaranteed
C                    Am                    Em
Your life s a sweet sixteen at thirty-three
C                    Am                    Em
You ve had it up to here with both hemispheres
C                    Am                    Em
With no one left to revere, you my dear

Chorus:

F                    C            F            C
A scientist on TV, said aliens will be
F                    C                    G
The big discovery of the Century
F                    C                    F                    C
And you must be very pleased, this finally could mean
F                    C                    G
There s someone you can deem, worthy of your esteem La da da da

C            Am            Em
C            Am            Em

Verse 2:

C                    Am                    Em
I ve blamed myself for years, but it appears
C                    Am                    Em
There s nothing I could cheer to stop your tears

F                    C            F            C
A scientist on TV, said aliens will be

F                    C                    G
The big discovery of the Century

F                    C                    F                    C
And you must be very pleased, this finally could mean

F                    C                    G
There s someone you can deem, worthy of your esteem

C                    Am                    Em                    (repeat until end)
