C F G C G x2

[Verse 1]
```
C                       F         G         C                           G
```
I got you drunk and ego in my arms in your pocket there’s a picture of yourself
```
        C                                 F
```
I don’t know yeah, I know that I don’t know
```
                        C                       G
I know that I don’t see and I know that I am me

F       G           C
```
how can I know that I am me?
```
      F       G               C
```
yeah, how can I know that I’m not you?

```
C                       F         G         C                           G
so again, we’re so alone until it’s done, at least until tomorrow is today
```
            C                       F         G
it’s the same, the same after talking too much
```
C                               G
talking without something real to say

```
F       G           C               F       G           C
how can I know that I’m awake, when I don’t feel when I fall asleep
```
C                               F   G                   C                   G
what makes the waves turns into sound what’s the music when there’s no noise?
```
C                               F   G                   C                   G
what makes the light turns into sight where’s the point where I make my choice

[Chorus]
```
F                   G           C
```
all days that will pass before Sunday
```
          F           G               C
```
when you close two tired eyes I fade away
```
                                F           G       C
```
when you close your eyes will the whole world pass away
```
              F               G           C
```
and you take away everything that once was me
```
                                F           G       C
```
when you close your eyes does the whole world pass away

                      F                    G           C
and you take away everything that once was me

[Repeat Verse 1]
C                         F            G          C                                      G

I got you drunk and ego in my arms in your pocket thereâ€™s a picture of yourself
          C                                    F
I donâ€™t know yeah, I know that I donâ€™t know
                          C                       G
I know that I donâ€™t see and I know that I am me
F        G              C
how can I know that I am me?
         F          G                   C
yeah, how can I know that Iâ€™m not you?

C                          F              G           C                              G
so again, weâ€™re so alone until itâ€™s done, at least until tomorrow is today
             C                          F             G
itâ€™s the same, the same after talking too much
C                                   G
talking without something real to say

[Chorus]
F                   G             C
all days that will pass before Sunday, Monday, Tuesday too
            F                 G               C
when you close two tired eyes I fade away
                              F             G      C
when you close your eyes will the whole world pass away
                  F             G       C
and you take away everything that once was me
                              F             G      C
when you close your eyes does the whole world pass away
                  F             G       C
and you take away everything that once was meeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee
