          Dm                                  Bb
There is an empty space in the chair tonight

          F                  C
Cause he don t feel right

          Dm                                  Bb
There are storm clouds brewing at the back of his mind

          F                  C
As he steps outside

          Dm
He will be twenty in a week

          Bb
But he s old for his years

          F
He s had many of those

          C
To confront his own fears

          Dm                                  Bb
'Cause his father s not the man he d like to grow up to be

          A
And his mother isn t growing old grace fully

Refrão:

          Bb                                  F                                  C
He says times like these I don t want to be a superstar

          Bb          Dm                                  C
Cause reality tv killed them all in America

          Bb          Dm                  C
Oh the sun always shines in a magazine

          Bb                  Dm                                  C                  A
Tonight can we be free to be who we really are

( Dm Bb F C )

          Dm                                  Bb
