

Cathedrals

Joan Osborne

JOAN OSBORNE - Cathedrals (2008)

(Capo I)

F G Em Am

F G
In the shadows of tall buildings
Em Am
Of fallen angels on the ceilings
F G
Oily feathers and bronzen concrete
Em A7 Dm
Faded colors, pieces left incomplete
Dm G C
The light moves slowly past the electric fence
C Am Dm
Across the borders between continents

Dm G C
In the Cathedrals of New York and Rome
C Am Dm
There is a feeling that you should just go home
Dm G F G Em Am
And spend the lifetime finding out just where that is

In the shadows of tall buildings
The architecture is slowly peeling
Marble statues and glass dividers
Someone is watching all of the outsiders
The line moves slowly through the numbered gate
Past the mosaic of the Head of State

In the Cathedrals of New York and Rome
There is a feeling that you should just go home
And spend the lifetime finding out just where that is

In the shadows of tall buildings
Of open arches and lessly knealing
Sonic landscapes echoing vistas
Someone is listening from a safe distance
The line moves slowly into the fading light
A final moment in the dead of night

In the Cathedrals of New York and Rome
There is a feeling that you should just go home
Dm G F Am A7 Dm

And spend the lifetime finding out just where that is

In the Cathedrals of New York and Rome

There is a feeling that you should just go home

And spend the lifetime finding out just where that is