Nothing To Show
Jon Langford

  NOTHING TO SHOW   Jon Langford   (With Richard Buckner)

F#

F#                                                      G#m
Nothing to show for the things that I ve done
G#m                                      C#                      B
There were places to go and I had to choose this one
F#
         G#m
Well I had some dreams in My head, had some tricks up my sleeve
G#m                                                    B
Now I ll be lucky to leave with my life, yes Ill be lucky to leave
         F#

F#                                          G#m
Over The line and into your bed
G#m                                    C#
     B
Where desire and shame consume like a flame, and wise men might fear to tread
F#
G#m
You closed my mouth with a touch, I said too much
G#m                                              B
     F#
Oh you tried to turn back the tide, you didn t want to know

Chorus:
G#m                        C#        F#                              B
You can find me here where the city lights burn
G#m           C#                     F#
The stars right out of the sky
G#m                                      C#                        F#
And the birds sing all night as the traffic rolls by
G#m                              C#
loosing my name like the millions who came F#                          B
just to say that they were right
          G#m                                                  B
We ll be lucky to leave, lucky to leave with our lives
          G#m                      B                          F#
We ll be lucky to leave, lucky to leave with our lives

F#                                              G#m
Nothing to show since it all went wrong
G#m                          C#                              B and nowhere to go but the streets that I m walking on

F#

       G#m
I had changed horse in midstream, i went down like a stone
G#m   B
            F#
Thought Id slip off the hook, now Im battered and cooked, gutted and boned

Chorus

F#   G#m
