VERSES

Tuesday at 2am, long after you said goodnight

I put the coffee on, strong and I bought me some time

The roses you left me, were dead on the desk to my right.

A subtle reminder, that nothing s designed to survive

And love over-come is a battle half won

The view from both sides of the gun

CHORUS

And I m so afraid

To be ready to change

All these locks.

To disconnect the dots.

And I just can't take the pain

although make no mistakes

Cause it's time I untied all the knots

Cause if there's one thing I know that I'm not

Well that's a ship in the dock

INTERLUDE: G Cadd9 Em7 x2 Am5 B
G Cadd9 Em7

LYRICS:

Tuesday at 2am, long after you said goodnight
I put the coffee on, strong and I bought me some time
The roses you left me, were dead on the desk to my right
A subtle reminder, that nothing's designed to survive.

And love over-come is a battle half won
The view from both sides of the gun.

CHORUS:

And I'm so afraid
To be ready to change
All these locks
To disconnect the dots.
And I just can't take the pain
Although, make no mistakes
Cause it's time I untied all the knots
Cause if there's one thing, I know that I'm not
Well that's a ship in the dock.

The wind's picking up, and I'm looking above for a sign
Your photograph's hanging, just clinging a moment to life
And I've seen the top of those trees on the opposite side
And if the grass isn't greener, then I'll know at least that I tried.

And I won't let myself live in this world of what ifs
But it don't get much harder than this
