This is Snow Day by Lisa Loeb and Nine Stories. This is my Interpretation of the song. I m really speculating it on this one!
But i got it sounding real good when I play it.

The Song opens up with this Like Apegiated riff or something. I am not sure exactly of the note Pattern, but i Know the chords from which it comes from...Play a picking pattern from each of these chords for 4 beats then go to the next chord and do the same thing.

Appegiate Each chord for 4 beats

e---0-----0-----0-----0-----12-----0-----0-----9-----10-----
B---12-----10-----12-----10-----10-----12-----10-----10-----10-----
G---12-----11-----12-----11-----9-----12-----11-----9-----9----- D---0-----0-----0-----0-----11-----0-----0-----0-----0-----
A-----0-----
```

When Lisa comes in Singing it repeats the above again.
After The Picking pattern it goes into just Strumming the Above chords, just listen for the pattern.

When it gets to the part when she says
And When i Get down to my bones...
It just goes into strumming alternateng chords starting by going from G D G D
And then it switches to this progression when she sings
First by Mind, then by Music...
B E B E

Then it s back to the Opening chords, strumming away like in the opening verses.

The rest of the song repeats these the begining chords and these chords. In the G D G D progression it changes to G Bm G Bm in like the las verse. Also, after the intro chords the 2nd time it goes C (8th fret) D G D . That s pretty much it. Have lots of fun!
