F C Bb

I walked home beholding.

The lights in the park

The moving trees

The silent corners

The world s new cloak

A final breath of storm blows snowdrifts in the street then blows away over the water.

On an island

across from town

Isolated

Close and alone

Looking across the water seeing people slowly living all their lives.

This is the feeling from inside an island body

(Looking out from inside a sea of thoughts, distant and quiet.)

Tossed on the waves

blown onto land

Grasping meaning

in churning mess

A moment of clear air breathing, seeing the expanse.

Totally at peace with the meaninglessness of living.

Drifting in a changing world

alone

Reaching for a solid thing
in vain
The stone dissolves in the same wind I swim through.
Where I live there is a constant roaring.

Bottomless absence
through a cloud hole
The sky was moving
I saw it drift
Seeing breathing waves of water roll in the sky.
The wind has increased.
