I Want To Be Wrong
No Use for a Name

Ok, that s the most basic acoustic tab possible I guess. But since it s the only one at the moment, it s better than nothing I guess.

Btw: The original version starts with an c#m!

Verse

Am                            E
Let me introduce myself, my name is no concern
   E                              Am          G
The room is filled with superficial voices
F                        G
As the smoke clears I can see one hundred little lies
E                          Am          G
Racing to the finish for a consolation prize

Refrain

            C
I want to be wrong
               G             Am        G     F
I wish that I was uncertain just like yesterday
      C                    G
This is not who I am, been planning my escape
   F              G              Am
So long now that my map looks like a maze

Bridge

        G                   Am                        E
Are you confusing me with someone else you hardly even know?
    F                            G
I m sitting here observing and more often I am learning
     E                              Am                    F  Fm
That you are an artist and this is your show... so sing it
