Collapse The light Into Earth - Porcupine Tree

Tuning: standard

notes: although this song is for piano it sounds quite decent on the guitar. a couple of considerations had to be taken in. primarily to get the correct sound full chords shouldn't be used because of the simplicity and the inversions used on the piano. so i took some of chords down to simple 5 chords, but be aware that the version normally has triads. and if you were to play this on the piano (incase anyone does) it's a simple Bm (BDF#), Cmaj (CEG), Gmaj 1st inv. (BDG), Gsus2 1st inv. (ADG), D 2nd inv. (ADF#). or whatever chords you would like to call them. and with the left hand you do single bass notes B,C,G,A (hold A for two bars). but back to guitar.

sounds great played softly strummed with your thumb on nylon strings, but anything works as always.

chords - not the actual names just the bass notes.
