 C F
There's a full moon over this ancient town
 Dm G
A clock faced the colour of the sky
 C F
And every street that we walk down
 Dm G
Belongs to the house, where my father died

Where prisoners march in luck step with each other
Reavers test the limit of their reign
Dragging their dead weight from the other
While I claim my place, centre stage

I've been thrown by the thrashing of his going
Chained to his unseen stride
I've walked in luck step without knowing
My indifference, my only disguise

Now it comes through me like an injection
Anonymous pain throbbing reel inside
And every pulse in my body
Belongs to the house, where my father died

Won't catch his spirit in a candle
On alive finished guttering glow
And death comes through these streets like a scandal
Bent up and beaten, oh bitter body blow

And in bars and shaded back rooms
Those who can't cope just get high
But every place this drink takes me to
Belongs to the house, where my father died

And thereâ€™s a full moon over this ancient town
Head lights numb the banner of the sky
Rain rages the steadings and the open ground
Iâ€™m a child fighting shadows with tears in my eyes

And the valley cannons and thunder
Trees blow beneath the bruising of the sky
Like centuries shield the lake from my wonder
And Iâ€™m as helpless as a child hiding from life

And the face from my mind is fading
I could old wounds for the very first time
Tonight thereâ€™s going to be a reckoning
Iâ€™m entering the house, where my father die
