

Tonight`s the night
Rod Stewart

B                                    E            B                                    E
Stay away from my window,        stay away from my back door, too.
B                                    E                                    B                                    E
Disconnect the telephone line,    relax baby and draw that blind.
B    E
Kick off your shoes, and sit right down,
B    E
and loosen up that pretty French gown.
B    E
Let me pour you a good long drink,
B    E
Oh baby, don t you hesitate,    cause :

B                                    E            B                                    G#m
Tonight s the night,                it s gonna be alright.
                                  C#m                                    E                                    B - F#
Cause I love you girl, ain t nobody gonna stop us now

B                                    E
Come on, angel, my heart`s on fire,
B                                    E
don t deny your man s desire.
B                                    E
You d be a fool to stop this tide,
B                                    E
spread your wings and let me come inside,    cause:

B                                    E            B                                    G#m
Tonight s the night,                it s gonna be alright.
                                  C#m                                    E                                    B - F#
Cause I love you girl, ain t nobody gonna stop us now.

B                                    E
Don t say a word, my virgin child,
B                                    E
just let your inhibitions run wild.
B                                    E
The secret is about to unfold,
B                                    E
upstairs, before the nights too old,    cause:

B                                    E            B                                    G#m
Tonight s the night,                it s gonna be alright.
                                  C#m                                    E                                    B - F#
Cause I love you girl, ain t nobody gonna stop us now.