Beside The Rio Grande Strawbs [Intro] Am Em Am G [Verse] Am Em It happened rather suddenly that the Preacher came to town Αm Em With stories from the testaments of men of great renown Am Em With his box of patent medicines, he swore to cure all ills Δm From the lameness in the horses, to the children s colds and chills Em And he had along his Indian wife and a country music band Am Am Em Am G Who sang of peace and brotherhood beside the Rio Grande [Verse] Em Am Now the Preacher quickly gathered sick and poor from miles around Am Em Who came to him for comfort and to hear his country sound Am But the mayor thought he was trouble when he spoke against the law Am And he saw the growing power of the crowds that he could draw Em And he worried when the Preacher bought himself a plot of land Am F Am Em Am G To settle with his family beside the Rio Grande [Verse] Em Am The saloon was pretty crowded and the stakes was a-running high Am  $\mathbf{Em}$ And the girls sang sentimental songs that made us cowboys cry Am Em We began to criticise the Preacher, marrying a squaw Am And how could he associate with cripples, drunks and whores Em And in a crazy fit the Preacher scattered chips and winning hands Am  $\mathbf{F}$ Am Em Am G And condemned it as a den of vice beside the Rio Grande

[Verse]

Am

Now the boys were drunk and rowdy, and mostly pretty mean Am Em And we dragged him to the sidewalk and we whipped his shoulders clean Am Em We said he was responsible for bringing on the drought That had burned off all the spring grass and had wiped the young herd out Em The sheriff would not get involved, the law could take no hand Am The Preacher had not harmed a soul [Verse] Am Em We pegged him on the hillside alongside two Apache braves Am Em Who d been given picks and shovels and been made to dig their graves Am Em And when he asked for water, stood and pissed around his feet Am While his tongue swelled up and blackened in the burning desert heat Em And someone said we ought to mark the Preacher with a brand Am F Am Em Am G To show that he did not belong beside the Rio Grande [Verse] Am Em Then the sky began to darken and a breeze whipped up the dust Em Am And some of us were frightened, while others swore and cursed Am Em And the Preacher said a few words with his final dying breath Αm About forgiving us for what we had done to bring about his death And as the night began to fall we covered him with sand Am And left his weary bones to bleach
