A F#m

Come all you cowboys and hear what I say

G D G A

The legend of Dan Toe still lives today

A D

When I was a boy, I rode with a man

A G A

...and I still can remember what happened to Dan.

He knew the frontier from the east to the west

Wore a lone star of silver, proud on his chest

He wrestled a cyclone or so I am told

He proved he was brave in those days of old (?)

When the rivers of Texas grew dangerously high

We kept Dan a laughin for fear he would die

And his tears would surely flow

To the gulf of Mexico

CHORUS:

E D A

With a Navajo rug and a quart in his jug he would sing

D A

I remember it well

E D A

A teacher of lessons his black Smith and Wesson would ring

C#

Like a bell

D A

At night he would dance the fandango

D A

On the mesas outside of durango

D

The women would holler

And throw down a dollar

C#

to drink from his well.

Jam

Dan told us stories before we d retire

And spirits would dance round the flames of the fire

He told us of rednecks no long to have known

No long will those flickering campfires glown

Dan had a sweeheart who fear for his life

When a rattlesnake came between her and a knife

Dan Toe snuck up from behind her

And Danny took the bite from that ol sidewinder

D Bm

As the light of last sun faded from his eyes

F#m E

She kept Dan a laughin for fear he would die

And his tears would surely flow

G A

To the Gulf of Mexico

CHORUS

Jam

Dan s dead and gone and I m growing old

And I never could save that silver and gold

But I still have my fiddle and I still have my bow

And I make myself (something) where ever I go

CHORUS

Jam->End
