Caught by the light, aware but asleep

Never as close as the friends that you keep

Drifting away on one final breath

The further you climb, calm silhouette

And takes you along, long, long, long

And takes you along, long, long, long

Far from a world ailing to live

Far from the wreckage you were left in

And the crossing is over where the righteous remain

In the memory it's deeper, survived by a name

The rest is sufficient, a midnight complaint

Left waiting in silence, left only to sleep

It takes you along, long, long, long

And takes you along, long, long, long
