D A E

Let me stay in the valley by the river one more day

I remember a place, where mountains divide.
And I stood at the edge of the canyon so wide I saw so many years, ten thousand before and it will carve out the land, for ten thousand more

When the first light of dawn heats up the dew

And the drops shine like diamonds where sunlight shines through My heart can rest if just for a while
And my tired feet can walk for another mile
