

Never Ever
The Orwells

This is a tune by The Orwells. Young rock n roll band from Chicago.
The song has only two chords as far as I ve figured out.
Some melody can be played when changing chords, it s not to hard to figure it out.
The difference between parts of the song is that some of them are played louder, have a different rhythm, drums are drummed harder, guitars are strummed heavier and have a break in between of lyrics/singing.
So, I ll call quieter parts verse and louder ones chorus.

Intro: G,C,G,C

Verse:

G
Damn, I feel lazy,
C
But don t forget to wake me,
G
We got this fear of aging,
C
We re living in a daydream,

(Second part of the verse is a bit louder)

G
Tell me why she s shaking,
C
Tell me what we re chasing,
G
We got this fear of aging,
C
I know that something s changing, changing, changing...

Little Break: G, C.

Verse:

G
But, damn, I feel lazy,
C
Don t forget to wake me,
G
We got this fear of aging,
C
We re living in a daydream, daydream, daydream...

Little Break: G, C.

Chorus:

G
I know that something s changing,
C
We got this fear of aging,
G
We re living in a daydream,
C
Tell me what we re chasing,
G
I know that something s changing, changing...

Verse (goes quiet gradually):

C
But, damn, I feel lazy,
G
Now that something s changed me,
C
We re living in a daydream,

Little break: G, C.

Chorus(The loudest part, guitars strummed and drums drummed at full power):

G
Damn, I feel lazy
C
But you forgot to wake me,
G
We got this fear aging,
C
We re living in a daydream, daydream...

Outro(after the last chorus two chords played just to end it nicely): G,C.

End on G.

Lyrics and chords figured out by me, hope they re accurate.
Have fun!
