1. I met a gin soaked barroom queen in Memphis,
          C                              G
    she tried to take me upstairs for a ride.
         C                                 F
    She had to heave me right across her shoulder,
          C                     G               C
    cause I just can t seem to drink you off my mind.
          G          C
It s the Honky Tonk Women,
                   G                       C
give me, give me, give me the honky tonk blues.
       C                             F
2.  Strollin  on the boulevards of Paris,
        C                              G
    as naked as the day that I will die.
          C                                    F
    The sailors they re so charming there in Paris,
              C                  G               C
    but they just don t seem to sail you off my mind.

3. I laid a divorcee in New York City,
       C                              G
    I had to put up some kind of a fight.
         C                               F
    The lady she all dressed me up in roses,
          C                 G               C
    she blew my nose and then she blew my mind.
