

The Lion And The Wolf
Thrice

Bm                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion s outside of your door, the wolf s in your bed.
Bm                                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion s claws are sharpened for war, the wolf s teeth are red.
Em                                    D                                    Gm                                    Bm
What a monstrous sight he makes mocking man s best friend.
Em                                    D                                    Gm                                    F#7
Both the wolf and lion crave the same thing in the end.
Bm                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion s outside of your door, the wolf s in your bed.

Repeat for interlude and second verse.

Bm                                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The wolf he howls, the lion does roar the wolf lets him in.
Bm                                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion runs in through the door, the real fun begins.
Em                                    D                                    Gm                                    Bm
A stable thrash upon you will rip open your flesh.
Em                                    D                                    Gm                                    F#7
The lion eats his fill and then the wolf cleans up the mess.
Bm                                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion s outside of your door, the wolf s in your bed.
Bm                                    Em                                    F#7                                    Bm
The lion s outside of your door, the wolf s in your bed.
